

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

There are provided a technique for generating a three-dimensional image of the real world. The image generating system comprises a data management apparatus which stores three-dimensional shape data of at least a part of an object area; a camera which shoots at least a part of the object area; an image generating apparatus which generates an image of the object area using the three-dimensional shape data acquired from the data management apparatus and the picture shot by the camera.